Rose and Pistachio Tarts

Wellness devotees are seeking out treats that are raw, gluten-free, refined-sugar-free and usually organic. Raw desserts use ingredients that have not been heated above 42C, so the food retains all its enzymes, providing health benefits. Feeling the raw love? These pistachio love tarts will have you falling for raw, and are perfect for impressing that gluten-free buddy or beau. It's best to soak the cashews overnight and you'll need to take into account freezing time.

Ingredients

Base

- ½ cup pistachios
- ½ cup almond meal (or ground activated almonds)
- ¼ cup shredded coconut
- ½ tsp vanilla powder
- 1½ tbsp coconut oil
- 1 tbsp coconut nectar

Filling

- ½ cup cashews
- 1½ tbsp rose water
- 1 tbsp coconut oil, melted
- 2 tbsp coconut nectar
- ¼ cup coconut yoghurt
- pinch of saffron

Method

1. For the base, add half the pistachios (a quarter of a cup) to the blender and process until you have a fine powder, then add the rest of the base ingredients and process until it all comes together. The mixture should stick when pressed with the fingers. If it is too dry, you can add a little extra coconut nectar or coconut oil, depending on taste.
2. Divide the mixture in half and press firmly and evenly into two mini tart tins. Freeze for 30 minutes or until quite firm.
3. For the filling, soak the cashews overnight, then rinse well before using.
4. Add all the ingredients to a high-powered blender or food processor and blend until silky smooth.
5. Remove the bases from the freezer and divide the mixture into each and place back in the freezer for one hour.
6. In a mortar and pestle, crush one tablespoon of pistachios and sprinkle over the tarts to decorate. You can store these in the freezer. Just remove 20 minutes before serving.

Portuguese Tarts

These little custard tarts originate from Lisbon, and, apparently, were originally one way for monasteries to use up surplus egg yolks left over after using the whites as a starching agent for religious garments. This is such a simple version, where the custard doesn't need to be cooked before baking. They are best eaten on the day of cooking and are even better when still a little warm.

Ingredients

- 375g pre-rolled puff pastry
- 1 tbsp castor sugar
- ½ tsp ground cinnamon
- icing sugar, optional

Filling

- ½ tbsp cornflour
- ½ lemon, juiced
- 200g creme fraiche
- 150g castor sugar
- 2 extra-large eggs
- 2 extra-large egg yolks
- 1 tsp vanilla extract

Method

1. Preheat the oven to 220C fan-forced or 240C conventional. Grease or spray a medium-sized muffin tin.
2. Lay the pastry out on the bench and evenly scatter over the sugar and cinnamon. Press the sugar and cinnamon into the pastry with a rolling pin, stretching out the pastry a little in the process. Roll up like a Swiss roll, neatening the ends by pushing them in a little as necessary. Cut the roll into 14 even pieces.
3. Flatten each pastry disc out in the palm of your hand with your fingers until about 3mm thick. Press the pastry into the prepared muffin moulds and chill for 20 minutes.
4. For the filling, add the cornflour and lemon juice to a small bowl and mix until combined.
5. Add the remaining filling ingredients to a large bowl and whisk in the cornflour slurry until combined and smooth.
6. Divide the filling between the tart shells and cook for 20 minutes, increasing the oven to 250C fan-forced or 270C conventional for the last five minutes. If you like, dust with a little icing sugar to serve.

Tarts

Rum and Raisin Butter Tart

Ingredients

- ½ cup sultanas
- 2 tbsp dark rum
- 3 sheets ready-rolled shortcrust pastry
- ½ cup soft brown sugar
- ½ cup golden syrup
- 60g butter, melted
- ¼ tsp salt
- 2 eggs
- ½ tsp vanilla extract
- vanilla ice-cream, to serve (optional)

Method

Heat your oven to 200C fan-forced (220C conventional). Cover the sultanas with rum and set aside for 10 minutes to absorb. Thaw the pastry, cut into 10-centimetre rounds and fit them into the cups of a 12-cup muffin pan. Whisk together the sugar, golden syrup, butter, salt, eggs and vanilla extract. Divide the sultanas between the pastry cases and fill with the syrup to three-quarters of their capacity. Bake for 15 minutes, then allow to cool in the tin. Serve warm with ice-cream, or cool to room temperature before serving. Watch out! They'll be runny inside.

Citrus & Ginger Semolina Cake

This rich and decadent cake is moistened with a winter citrus syrup. Serve with a generous dollop of sour cream to help balance the sweetness.

Ingredients

- 3 eggs
 - 220g (1 cup) sugar
 - 180g (1 cup) fine semolina
 - 280g (1 cup) thick yoghurt
 - 75g butter, melted
 - juice of 1 lime
 - 2 tsp grated ginger
 - 35g (¼ cup) plain flour
 - 1 tsp baking powder
 - sour cream, to serve
- Syrup
- 220g (1 cup) sugar
 - 1 tbsp honey
 - 5 slices ginger, bruised
 - juice of 1 orange
 - rind of 1 lime (green part only, pith removed), julienned
 - rind of 1 orange (orange part only, pith removed), julienned

Method

1. For the syrup, place all the ingredients and 250ml (1 cup) of water into a small saucepan and bring to a simmer. Simmer for 5 minutes, stirring to dissolve the sugar, then allow to cool. Remove the ginger slices.
2. Heat your oven to 170C fan-forced (180C conventional). Grease a 25cm springform cake tin. Whisk the eggs and sugar together until the sugar is dissolved. Add the semolina, yoghurt, melted butter, lime juice and the juice only from the grated ginger (squeeze it with a spoon or with your fingers) and beat with a wooden spoon until the mixture is smooth. Fold in the flour and baking powder until completely combined. Pour the batter into the cake tin and bake for 35 minutes, until it's golden brown and a toothpick inserted into the centre comes out clean.
3. Spoon the cooled syrup all over the hot cake and allow the cake to cool to room temperature. Remove from the tin and serve slices of the cake with a dollop of sour cream. Richard's tip: If you love cakes but don't make them too often because you're likely to polish off the whole thing, just do what I do: bake a cake, then give half of it to a friend. Cakes are made for sharing anyway.

New ultraviolet technology for Hanmer's drinking water

Drinking water safety standards in the Hurunui District are keeping up with the latest technology. Hurunui District Council has recently installed a new ultraviolet disinfection unit at the Hanmer Springs water treatment plant.

Before the water reaches the household taps, it is exposed to UV light at a specified wavelength, which kills bacteria and protozoa, (such as giardia and cryptosporidium).

Dan Harris, Chief Operations Officer, said this new unit meets the Drinking Water Standards for New Zealand. "The UV intensity is continuously monitored and alarmed, providing assurance that water being supplied to the Hanmer Springs community is safe."

The Pinkie asked the obvious question and that was whether water would still be chlorinated (which you will remember was going to be a temporary measure). The reply we received was:

"Chlorine will continue. UV treats the source water as the water flows through it. Chlorine provides a residual barrier/protection for the piped network."

EXCERPT FROM THE CITATION

This is to commend Richard Tapper for an Hurunui District Council Award for his services to the community. Richard is Hanmer Springs born and bred with his parents having met when they worked at Queen Mary Hospital in the 1930s. Leaving town for boarding school and university as well as a career in the oil industry, Richard travelled the world, visiting well over one hundred countries, before he finally settled back in his beloved hometown in the year 2000. Richard operated a catering business and opened Malabar Restaurant before he took over the Hanmer Springs Village News approximately 13 years ago.

In that time the Village News or 'Pinkie' as it is known locally, has progressed from a cyclostyled pink newsletter, about 200 of which were for sale through community outlets, to its current emergence as a sizeable, quality, colour magazine, distributed free to the community via the supermarket and gas station — but in a recent innovation he has also introduced a pdf electronic version which is now emailed free to just over seven hundred additional subscribers. The distribution list, which continues to grow, now includes most ratepayers, residents and home owners, (including absentee owners) in the community.

From the first period of lockdown Richard took it upon himself to produce an expanded 'cyberPinke' a wholly electronic, advertising-free version of the publication, which pooled all the community information in regard to Covid-19 and its ramifications. With everything shut down, the publication was expanded to over double the usual number of pages and it became a vital and reliable source of unbiased fact, the only trustworthy all-in-one source of information about Covid 19 as it pertained to the Hanmer community. It encompassed all the news and vital updates from the Department of Health, MSD and other Government bodies, Hurunui Council, the local Medical Centre, Business Association, ECan, and sources of grants and assistance, as well as other relevant organisations. It was the place that all members of the community could tap into for the information they required without having to source their intelligence from the myriad source of originators. It was described by many people as a "glue that held the community together" with everything relevant to Hanmer and to Covid being available in one place, especially when communication was in a state of some confusion with businesses and other traditional sources of information either closed, or in the case of much social media, disseminating rumour and false information.

He was also the first to raise the idea of a local food bank and assistance for people who had lost their employment, a concept which was taken up and administered by the Hanmer Springs Business Association.

Richard continued to produce this special edition of the Village News at his own expense for ten weeks during the initial reaction to the virus. Not only did he produce the publication as the major source of information, but he managed to balance it with lighter things such as trivia, humorous articles and cartoons, a facet which proved highly popular as a source of entertainment when most families were confined to the house. There were several people from within the community who expressed a wish to nominate Richard for this award.

The Hurunui District Council would like to congratulate the recipients of this year's Hurunui Community Awards, including those who received community service awards and those who received heritage and environmental funding.

The recipients were presented with their awards on Wednesday 23 September at a ceremony officiated by Mayor Marie Black in the Hawarden Hall.

The annual Community Service Awards are presented to members of the community in recognition of hard work and exceptional service. Nominations are sought on an annual basis, around mid-year, though were delayed this year due to COVID-19.

Mayor Black said it was a marvellous privilege to host the celebration and highlighted that 2020 has been a year of challenge, courage, commitment and cooperation.

"Volunteers distinguish and enrich our district," she said. "They are special and almost inevitably have neither sought acknowledgment nor reward. It is through celebrations like these that we get a chance to recognise the efforts of many."

To those receiving awards, Mayor Black said "We firmly believe your hard work and exceptional service to our district is worthy of recognition."

Community Service Awards:

Sue Harris, Amuri, Trevor Stanly-Joblin, Amberley, Debbie Anderson, Cheviot, Alex Baxter, Glenmark, Richard Tapper, Hanmer Springs, Mel Ruck, Hurunui. The Mayor's Community Service Award, Winton and Jean Dalley. In addition awards and grants were made for the Heritage Fund, (one of which went to Michael van de Weil, Hanmer Springs for the Old Post Office), Hurunui Environment and Hurunui Youth.

The Community, Environmental & Heritage Awards and all that they stand for.

I am always impressed (isn't strong enough a word) at the breadth and depth of work put into maintaining the fabric of our communities, our history and our ecosystems by the folk who live amongst us, quietly going about their business- but enriching their own and others lives by volunteering so much of their time to causes, committees and projects to which they see a need. These people then step up and help to fill that need.

There are many such people here in Hanmer Springs- some of whom may never be 'officially' recognised.

We are fortunate that local government is able, in a small way to support or recognise some of these worthy causes through this award process. To Richard Tapper and the Pinkie, it is keeping a printed news sheet going consistently for years connecting with those who don't carry a device around in their pockets- especially this autumn when the world shut down and no money was to be made. For Michael van de Weil, it is help towards caring for one of the most historic buildings in our village. It has to be done.

Thank you .

Mary Holloway

THE TOPHOUSE TRAGEDY

Crowds gathered around their local Post Offices when the news that something was tragically wrong at Tophouse first broke. All they knew was that one man was confirmed missing and there were six other people still up there.

It wasn't until late evening on the 5th October that the full weight of the tragedy descended on the citizens of the Nelson region. Three men were dead, the first two at the hands of the third.

People demanded to know the truth. They wanted to know what had made William Bateman snap. What had driven a man, not believed to be of a cruel disposition, to murder? To fully understand what happened that fateful day at Tophouse, the full story of its history must be told.

It began in 1865 with a man and an idea. Nathaniel Longney, a resident of Nelson, wanted to create a haven for the sheep drovers working at the station in Rotoiti. He enlisted the help of Ned James, an expert in the field of cob construction, and together they built a hotel, The Tophouse Hotel. With its large open fire, comfy beds and a flagon of grog for just six old pence it was no wonder forty-eight sheep drovers chose to stay there each night. The Tophouse Hotel soon became a very successful business but things were about to change.

Coaches drove past Tophouse everyday as the road it was on was the only link to Blenheim, Picton and the West Coast. Mr Longney soon realised that if he were to transform the hotel into a more up-market establishment then he could attract the wealthier clientele that rode in those carriages. Slowly but surely Tophouse changed from a haven to a proper coach stop for companies such as Cobb & Co and Newmans. The bar still remained at Tophouse though and the sheep drovers still found solace in that.

As the tale progresses, Mr Longney, his wife Louisa and their four children, became a very wealthy family. They were able to hire staff, including Mr John Lane, who managed the hotel and Ms. Catherine Wylie who was a governess for the children. But none of them could have predicted the devastating event that would happen in their near future.

On the 4th October 1894 William Bateman, brother of Louisa Longney, went about his day as usual. He went to see a man about a dog he was interested in buying. He ate lunch with his friends in the Wakefield Hotel. He picked up his mail from the Belgrove Postmaster and made his way to Tophouse. He made good progress on his journey and he arrived around six o'clock. Making his way to the Telegraph Office he asked to borrow a gun from the unsuspecting linesman, under the pretence that he would be using it to hunt rabbits. Within two hours he had used that gun to kill two men.

The first victim: John Lane. Lane was much liked in the community and was popular throughout the Nelson region.

It is not known how Bateman persuaded Lane out of the hotel but he managed to get him to walk 200 yards down the Marlborough Road wearing his slippers. He was shot once just behind his left ear. Lane's body was found the next day by police, he had been callously dumped in the undergrowth.

The second victim: William Wallis, the linesman stationed at Tophouse Telegraph Office for the last five months.

Wallis was "universally respected by all" and was well liked in the community. Bateman asked Wallis if he wanted to go rabbit shooting with him as a way to make him leave the safety of the Telegraph Office. Wallis was at first hesitant stating that it was too dark and there was no moon, but he eventually gave in to Bateman's demands. Not fifty yards from the office Wallis was shot from behind, a single wound to the neck. His body was found the next morning by one of Mr Longney's sons, it had been poorly obscured by a horse cover.

Both Catherine Wylie at the hotel and Mrs Wallis at the Telegraph Station heard the second gunshot and both became suspicious, for it was far too close to the houses. However, neither of them knew that their true turmoil was about to begin.

The hotel was deserted, save for Ms. Wylie and the Longney children. Usually at this time of night the hotel would be bustling with sheep drovers at the bar but it was off-season. After he cold-bloodedly shot William Wallis, Bateman, made his way to the hotel in search of Ms. Wylie. When he found her he demanded that she accompany him on a walk but having heard the gunshot the woman suspected that walking was not all he wished to do. Bateman however, was adamant, and Ms. Wylie reluctantly agreed to go with him. Fortunately Longney's daughter, known affectionately as Lou Lou, insisted that she be allowed to walk with them. They set off into the darkening night, the child clinging to her governess, both of them petrified of the gun-toting man striding behind them. Unbeknownst to them Bateman had already decided that no harm would come to his niece and nephews. He did not attempt to shoot Ms. Wylie, his fear of harming the child stronger than his desire to kill her.

Meanwhile, Mrs Wallis over in the Telegraph Office was becoming more and more agitated.
