Ginger and Pistachio Biscuits

Ingredients

100 g (3 1/2 oz) unsalted butter
125 g (4 1/2 oz/ 2/3 cup) soft brown sugar
1 teaspoon natural vanilla extract
2 eggs, at room temperature
250 g (9 oz/2 cups) plain (all-purpose) flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
2 teaspoons ground ginger
100 g (3 1/2 oz/ 2/3 cup) pistachio nuts, chopped
melted white chocolate, for drizzling

Method

1. Preheat the oven to 170°C (325°F/Gas 3). Line two baking trays with baking paper.
2. Using electric beaters, cream the butter, sugar and vanilla in a bowl until light and fluffy. Add the eggs one at a time, beating well after each addition.
3. Sift the flour, baking powder and ginger into a bowl, then fold into the butter mixture. Stir the pistachios through.
4. Using lightly floured hands, roll tablespoons of the mixture into balls and place on the baking trays, allowing room for spreading. Flatten the biscuits slightly with a lightly floured fork.
5. Bake for 15 minutes, or until crisp and golden, swapping the trays around halfway through baking. Remove from the oven and leave to cool on the trays for 5 minutes, then transfer to a wire rack to cool.
6. Drizzle the cooled biscuits with melted white chocolate. Store in an airtight container for up to 4 days.

Combine butter and golden syrup in small pan, stir over high heat until melted. Mix soda with boiling water, add to melted butter and syrup. Add to flour mixture, stir until combined.

Shape level tablespoonsful of mixture into balls and flatten slightly; place onto prepared trays, about 6 cm apart.

Bake 15–20 minutes or until crisp and golden. Remove from oven, stand 2 minutes.

Ingredients

120g unsalted butter
6 tsp ground ginger
1/4 tsp ground cloves
180g dark brown or muscovado sugar
40g golden syrup
40g black treacle or molasses
1 egg (60g)

160g plain flour
80g chestnut flour
1 tsp bicarbonate of soda
Demerara sugar

Method

1. Melt the butter in a medium saucepan then stir in the ginger and cloves, sugar and syrups until smooth, then beat in the egg.
2. Mix in the flours and bicarb, then put the bowl in the fridge to chill and firm slightly.
3. Preheat oven to 160°C (140°C fan-forced) and prepare two trays by lining with non-stick baking paper.
4. Scoop out heaped teaspoons of the dough, about 25g each, and first roll them into balls then roll in demerara sugar and flatten each ball slightly while in the sugar.
5. Place balls on prepared trays, spacing the biscuits 3cm apart, and bake for about 25 minutes, until they've puffed up and sunk back down, cracking all over the top. Leave to cool on the tray.

Ned James

Master Builder in Cob

Ned James came to Nelson as a young man in 1842, having been a bosun on a whaling ship. He went on to be at various times a ships' builder/carpenter, blacksmith, house builder, station hand and rope maker. He became the master builder of cob buildings.

An old saying went that a cob house must have a good hat and dry feet. The stone foundation was the dry feet and the snow tussock thatched roof the good hat.

From the 1860s when the country out behind Hanmer Springs was emerging from being terra incognita into farmed land and stock routes from one province to the other it was necessary to build structures from the materials that were available. This was where Ned James came into his own and for two decades he was very much in demand to build cob cottages.

The high quality of his construction work is evidenced by the fact that these buildings still stand in original condition some one hundred and fifty years later. He built the first Molesworth 'homestead', a one roomed dwelling built in 1866 at the behest of runholder John Cornelius Murphy and this was extended some twenty years later for Murphy's successor, William Atkinson.

Murphy was the first run holder to ever winter over at Molesworth, which he did in James's original cob cottage. He later described it as " a sort of esquimaux's life. We were shut up sometimes four or five weeks.

The second homestead was a two room cottage each room with a separate doorway to a low verandah.

On most of James's buildings the original tussock thatch roofs have long since given way to corrugated iron.

In 1862 the Nelson government gave runholder Thomas Grant of St Helens a grant of £ 300 cash and the grazing rights for 'an house of accommodation in the Acheron Valley to be set strategically on a terrace at the junction of the Acheron and Clarence Rivers. Six others were built between Tophouse at the head of the Wairau Valley and Hasties just south of the Hurunui River.

When Ned James built the Acheron in 1863 he did so from materials available around the site, cob for the walls and thatched tussock for the roof. Some of the guests were very rough diamonds and if only walls could talk there would be many tales to tell. The house also served as an out station for the St Helens run. The building has since been reroofed with iron and the Department of Conservation and Heritage New Zealand volunteers have done subsequent conservation work.

Your writer remembers visiting the building in the 1950s and of great fascination was the fact that all the interior walls were papered with the glossy photo pages that appeared in the centre of the Auckland Weekly from 1861 onward. Sadly, in one of the conservation efforts somebody saw fit to remove the majority of these and although there are some left the majority have gone, as they have from Fowlers Hut further up the Clarence Valley.

James also built the original homesteads at the Rainbow and Tardale and Manuka Island and he also constructed many cob whares in the Wairau Valley. He did not use boxing in the making of his cob walls. The walls were trimmed and plastered after they had dried.

The first step in the construction of a cob structure was to dig a trench the size of the building. This was filled with stones and became the dry foundation on which the cob walls sat. the walls were then constructed by working around the entire perimeter, increasing the height by about a foot (30cm) a day. The whole wall couldn't be built in one go as the cob shrank as it dried..

The cob mixture for the Acheron accommodation house was made from local clay, tussock, animal dung and water. The beams which supported the tussock thatch roof were of black beech and these were cut from beech trees in Bush Gully.

When the building was completed and walls completely trimmed the whole building was then lime washed to further protect it from the weather.

Our historic pastoral landscapes are littered with shelterbelts of old man trees- Macrocarpas, and Monterey Pines (Pinus Radiata) which was introduced from California in the 1850's.

Here in NZ, these pines grow much faster than in their native environment, the seed blows with the nor west wind and the pines spread further south east.

On Hanmer Springs back doorstep, the shelterbelts around the old St James homestead site are no different. These old trees could have been planted from as early as the 1880's. Now we have a significant wilding pine problem in the Clarence river, (along with the broom)!

The Department of Conservation set about removing these big old seed source trees this year, as it needs to do, but halted logging when it was found that the historic St James woolshed (which that particular block of trees sheltered), immediately started losing roof panels in the wind!

The Department have come up with a plan to plant native trees for shelter and recreational value, and will gradually remove the pines over time. DOC hope that this planting will be a project with which the community will become involved when the time comes.

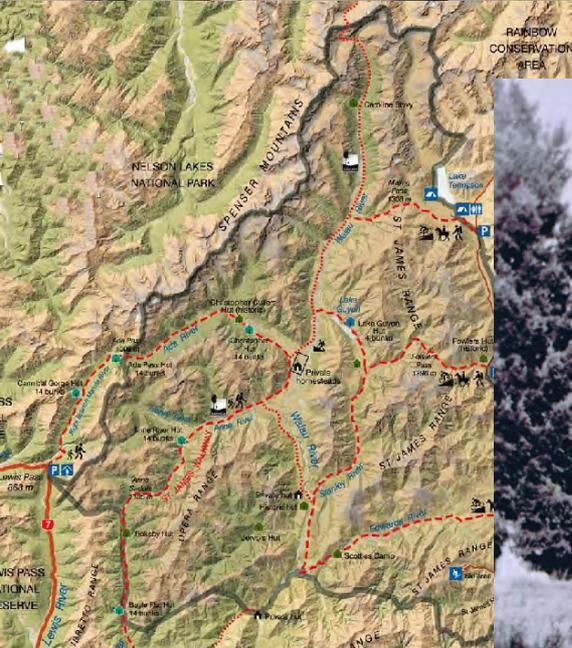

This planting will greatly enhance the end point of the St James Cycle trail. Hurunui Trails Trust (with the work largely being carried out by Mark Inglis), are working on creating a more definitive and rewarding arrival experience to the end point of the cycle trail with signage and plantings of tussocks.

This area, around the old homestead buildings is an easy- to reach spot for a high-country picnic, swim or family cycle ride or walk around the Homestead Run loop- an easy 1.5-2 hour return trip. It is very rewarding that the Department is protecting these historic buildings and planting shade and shelter for all to enjoy in the future.

Edwards Family At The Edwards

Andrew Ferguson of St James Journeys sent us this note last week.

“Last week I took Tony and Jan Edwards into St James conservation area and down the Edwards valley. Tony’s great grandfather took up the run in 1862. George Edwards came out on a ship from England and purchased the run .He never stocked it and sold the run after two years to G Wilmer. Moving to Kaiapoi he took up land there .Having nine children one being Frank , Tony’s father.They loved the experience.
